Introduction

Numismatic bibliographies are certainly nothing new; dozens of excellent specialized listings have been published. What is different about this work is its purpose. I have attempted to bring together all the important English language articles useful in attributing tokens and medals and group them according to subject.

It is relatively easy to find out if a book has been published on a particular subject which interests you. It is almost impossible to be certain that you have discovered all the important material which has appeared in journal articles. This is partly because numismatic material is scattered in so many places. Many articles on tokens and medals have appeared in non-numismatic journals. To name just a few these include: National Geographic, The Journal of Glass Studies, Bulletin of the History of Medicine, Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, The Journal of the Economic and Social History of the Orient, Annals of the Carnegie Museum.

Even our best periodicals have been neglected because of major problems facing anyone trying to determine precisely what is "out there." Suppose you are interested in medals of the Grand Army of the Republic. How many of you could discover that C.P. Nicholas published a series on G.A.R. medals in the American Journal of Numismatics between 1899 and 1906? Uncertainty about what has already been published becomes a serious problem when cataloging material and attempting to establish its rarity.

Even if you find a reference to an article which appears promising, earlier bibliographies have generally only listed the first page of each reference. It is therefore not clear if an article is an important work or just a page filler. Further, what was the purpose of the article? Is it a journalistic essay or a detailed catalog of a particular series? That can only be determined by examining each article, or by relying upon the judgement of one who has already screened the literature.

I originally constructed this bibliography for my own use over the past decade and have personally reviewed most of the major numismatic journals. As a result, I have been able to physically screen about seventy-five percent of the references listed herein. Other citations come from the footnotes of articles or from earlier bibliographies. Of particular importance in my effort have been the publications of the American Numismatic Society. I have examined each listing in their Library Catalog and their journal Numismatic Literature, which has been published since 1947. Most of the articles listed herein can be obtained from the American Numismatic Society as photocopies for a small fee. Some of the journals are also available on microfilm from Xerox University Microfilms.

Organization

An attempt has been made to design this work in order to make the material listed herein as easy to locate as possible. To make the articles more accessible when you have physically located a journal, I have given all the page numbers of each article series if they are known to me. Page numbers of supplements, even if by a different author, are listed with the original article. I have not included material published in weekly papers such as Coin World and Numismatic News since this type of material is not easy to store and thus is quickly lost to numismatics.

The listings are organized geographically in a manner similar to that used in Krause and Mishler's Standard Catalog of World Coins. Historical nations that no longer exist are listed under the modern country which most nearly occupies the same territory. Exceptions to this rule occur if a medieval state is not represented by any modern country. The Byzantine Empire is a good example of this. Further, I have not attempted to list the very few articles which have been published on ancient tokens and medals.

Following the author's name, the full title of an article is given. Additional information about the topic addressed is provided in parentheses. For example, the first time a king is mentioned in an article's title in this bibliography the years he ruled are given, e.g., "Edward I (1272-1307)." I have tried to direct this supplementary information to the non-specialist in order to make it easier for him to find material on any given topic.

A hierarchy of organization is followed for each country. General articles and topics for which only one or two articles exist are found in an initial section. The following categories are often used in this order:

- 1). Geographical Regions.
- 2). Weights and Coin Weights.
- 3). Tokens and Non-Governmental Issues.
- 4). Medals.
- 5). Military Medals and Decorations.
- 6). Badges and Seals.

Sub-categories are also used to make material easier to find. The particular classification scheme of each country is found in the Table of Contents and reflects the types of specialized material available. Some of the articles listed are only overviews of a series while others are detailed accounts. If I felt an article might be useful in identifying a token or medal, I have included it. When in doubt about an article I could not physically review, I have erred on the side of completeness

When possible I have only listed the year of publication and page numbers of each article. It is often impractical to give other information because most of the classic numismatic journals have been published with complex series, volume and part designations. A good example of this is the Numismatic Chronicle, which has been published in seven series of twenty volumes each since the 1830's. Volume numbers are only given when I have been unable to determine the year of publication. Month of issue is only given when a journal is not pagged consecutively throughout the year.

Coverage

While there is a great deal of useful material available in non-English language periodicals, I have not attempted to index it here. In part this is a simple question of space. The earliest English numismatic journal began publishing in the late 1830's and if I was to include all the foreign language periodicals this bibliography would quickly become unmanageable.

There is another compelling reason for my decision. Most English language journals are readily available in North America from the major organization libraries (A.N.S., A.N.A., C.N.A., etc.) and can be obtained with only moderate difficulty. This is not true of most foreign language journals. Some German, French, and Spanish periodicals are available in university libraries, but most of these are difficult, if not impossible, to locate. This is even more true for Eastern European journals. Since I did not have access to these publications I could not review them.

I would like to call your attention to two general literature reviews which include the foreign language numismatic literature. The first is Numismatisches Literatur-Blatt which was published in Germany from the 1880's to the Second World War. This is difficult to locate in the United States and seems to be spotty in its coverage. Since 1947 the American Numismatic Society has published over 100 issues of Numismatic Literature. This provides very complete coverage of the periodical literature. Its major disadvantage is that it reviews virtually everything and is thus bulky. It also has no master index.

Journal References

I have used abbreviations for the more commonly cited journals. These are the same as those utilized by the American Numismatic Society in Numismatic Literature. In addition I have provided the user information on where each article has been reprinted. Many more of these articles should be reprinted and most are no longer under copyright.

There are eight major anthologies of reprinted articles. Each of these is abbreviated according to the scientific style of footnoting. The author, date of publication, and pages of each article in the reprint are given.

Additional abbreviations which I have used include "ff." This indicates that other pages follow, but I have not been able to determine how long the article is. Three dots ("...") mean that the article is part of a series, but I do not know the page numbers of the intervening parts. If just a year of issue is given, I have not been able to determine the page numbers.
